

Manolo Blahnik

The most famous shoe designer in the world, at least according to well-known celebrities, joined Madrid's Golden Mile on Calle Serrano in the Salamanca district in 2005.

Here you can find the famous Manolos that Sarah Jessica Parker was so enamoured of in 'Sex and the City'. However, as a recommendation for these shoes, Madonna's praise is hard to beat: she claimed they were better than sex because they lasted longer.

Gossip apart, these women's shoes are surrounded by all the glamour and luxury imaginable, at prices only a privileged few can afford. These elegant, modern and very feminine shoes use materials of exceptional quality. Manolo Blahnik, who was born in the Canary Islands to a Spanish mother and Czech father, has worked in Europe and New York.
