

Former vestibule at Pacífico Station

The former vestibule of the Pacífico metro station forms part of the Metro de Madrid recovery of historic patrimony project to open it up to the public. Free guided visits to this station, which came into service in 1923 when the Atocha – Puente de Vallecas section of Line 1 was opened, are organised every Saturday of the year.

The original foyer closed in 1966 when the platforms of this line were extended, so new foyers and entrances were built, leaving this one obsolete. The refurbishment of this new museum space has respected the original decoration, designed by the architect, Antonio Palacios, hence joining other historic spaces of the Metro, such as the Pacífico Engine Shed, the Chamberí or Ópera stations.

Visits should be requested in advance by email to: andencero@tritoma.es.

Services

Servicio de visitas guiadas

Interest data

Address

Avenida de la Ciudad de Barcelona, 79 28007

Telephone

(+34) 91 392 06 93

Web

<https://www.metromadrid.es/es/quienes-somos/anden-cero>

Bus

8, 10, 24, 37, 54, 56, 57, 136, 141, 310

Type

Instalaciones culturales, Museos

Tourist area

Otros

Email

andencero@tritoma.es

Metro

Pacífico (L1, L6)

Price

Free

Opening times

Once a month (usually the second or third Saturday of each month, depending on requests and availability): 10am – 2pm.

Official tourism website

