

Welcome to Madrid

After visiting Madrid for the first time last summer, performing at the Mad Cool festival, Tash Sultana announces her return to Madrid with a new European tour. The Australian singer, this time accompanied by a full band, will make the jump to the big venues and play, for the first time, the WiZink Center on September 1st.

Considered one of the last young promises of music, Tash Sultana managed to reach the top in 2016 with a camera, innovative sound and the YouTube platform. From singing in the streets to getting out of the noisy life she had to live, she now fills rooms and has managed to release a groundbreaking album, which has led this multi-instrumentalist, expert in beat boxing, to her first international tour.

This is Flow State, with which he has won an ARIA award and with which he has also performed on stages such as Coachella and Lollapalooza. This year he has also collaborated with Matt Corby and Milky Chance and has released the single Can't Buy Happiness a song that he will perform live on September 1st along with his greatest hits.
